Finally, combination treatment with RA-IL2 and PD-1 blockade is currently being evaluated in Phase 1 clinical trials, and a recent trial demonstrated promising results in cutaneous melanoma \[[@B49]\]. Given that expression of PD-1 is upregulated in tumors with a high mutational burden \[[@B50]\], this combination treatment may be most effective in those patients with B-cell lymphomas who express PD-1. Whether this therapy can be combined with AIHA-Ig in cutaneous melanoma or even other B-cell lymphomas remains to be determined. In another study in which PD-1 blockade was combined with low-dose cyclophosphamide, it showed promising efficacy in a T-cell lymphoma model \[@B51\]. This therapy has not yet been tested in human cutaneous lymphomas, although its effect on T-cell expansion has been studied in vitro \[@B52\]. The majority of patients with cutaneous B-cell lymphomas are elderly individuals, and B-cell lymphomas may be more common in this age group \[@B41\]. The use of RA-IL2 and combination treatment with RA-IL2 and PD-1 blockade will require careful monitoring of patients' overall condition to determine if the high-dose IL-2 regimen could lead to severe adverse effects. Alternatively, it is also possible to administer high-
