Chapter 5 # Designing with Documents IN THIS CHAPTER **Designing for print: Using documents to create beautiful designs** **Designing for websites: Creating images for static and interactive websites** **Creating a great look with templates and editing with images** Whether you design for print or websites, creating an attractive and professional design is important to your project's success. One of the best ways to create a beautiful design is to use a design _template_ (an example of the desired design for your project) from which you can create a design that looks just like it. You can find several different types of designs for websites and for print (for print, you may need to convert your design from a web format to a print format). For both web design and print, using a template helps you work faster, saves time and resources, and gives your design a professional look. In this chapter, you discover the different types of documents and how to work with them. The more you know about the different kinds of documents, and the advantages and disadvantages of each, the more you can create your own specific documents to fit your needs. For example, you can create a variety of different kinds of graphics by using the different shapes you find in the Shapes and Adjustment Layers tools. You can also create a variety of different papers by using different backgrounds and transparency with the Transparency options. In this chapter, I describe many documents and some of their key features so you can find more information about them in Books II and III. ## Making Documents and Using Templates Like most software packages, Photoshop has different _documents,_ which are the building

PostgreSQL offers a way to write SQL syntax such that exceptions can be handled: DO $$ BEGIN BEGIN PRAGMA EXCEPTION_INIT(); UPDATE... EXCEPTION WHEN DUPLICATE_VALUE THEN UPDATE... END; END; $$; Is it possible to wrap such handler in a loop or something of the like? A: In BigQuery's handling of errors, when a statement fails, the response is in the form of an error event (e.g. jobs.status.errors, tables.files) with a human-readable message, the field message -- which can also contain debug-level information and a link to the job's response in Cloud Composer's trace viewer, if it exists. Here's an example workflow that would return all the unique values in a table: with errors as ( SELECT 1 UNION ALL SELECT 2 UNION ALL SELECT 1, 3 UNION ALL SELECT 4, 5 ) SELECT 1 AS id, 1 AS count, message,
